DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kojima et al. (US 5622567).

As to claims 1 and 13, Kojima et al. teaches a method of forming a film with laser evaporation as stated in the preamble (abstract), obtaining information on the thickness of a film on a test substrate that collects information over a fixed irradiation time while shining the laser on the substrate with a fixed positional relationship and adjusting the deposition time based on film thickness distribution relationship while moving or rotation the substrate relative to a point of incidence of the laser beam to the target (see Figures, column 1 lines 57- column 2 line 3, column 2 line 63 – column 3 line 3, column 5 lines 13-24, 40-49, 59-67, column 6 lines 1-10, column 9 line 33- column 10 line 8, column 11 lines 36-51, for example). It would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to collect experimental data such as film thickness before making the actual product as part of basic manufacturing sense, at least as broadly as the claim is currently written.

As to claim 2, the centerline of the plume does not intersect the substrate in some of the Figures.

As to claims 3 and 14, these steps are again obvious as routine experimental steps one of ordinary skill would take before manufacturing a final product. See the cited sections of Kojima et al. above.

As to claims 4-5, adjustments are made to deposition time according to the claimed factors in the above cited sections.

As to claim 6, rotation is taught by Kojima et al. in column 10 lines 9-19.

As to claims 7-9, various movement during deposition is described in Kojima et al. in column 10 lines 9-19, the above cited sections with regard to claims 1 and 13, and columns 3-4 et seq.

As to claims 10-12, a plurality of substrates or laser beams is taught in Figures 26, 44, 57, and 58, for example.
